Illinois weed law presents sticky situation for employers

Chicago Tribune

Marijuana will soon be legal in Illinois as a prescription painkiller, but that doesn't mean patients who test positive for pot can't be fired from their jobs. At the same time, employers will not be able to discriminate against workers or applicants on the sole basis of their status as medical marijuana patients.

Are you dazed and confused?

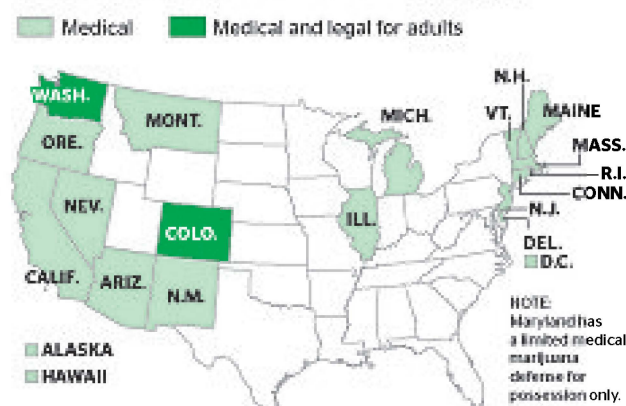

The legalization of medical marijuana, coming Jan. 1, presents some thorny workplace issues, especially since federal law continues to ban marijuana use. The language in the Illinois law sets up a potential clash between a drug-free workplace and patients' rights.

Employers in Illinois are struggling to reconcile their drug policies with the new right to get high. The Illinois Chamber of Commerce has held a dozen webinars on the matter, and all of them have sold out, said Todd Maisch, the group's executive vice president.

Human resource managers are wrestling with such questions as whether employees who use marijuana before they come to work might be too impaired to do their jobs, what they are allowed to ask job candidates and whether they can punish someone for engaging in what is now deemed legal activity.

"I'm still seeing a lot of confusion over the law," said Tom Posey, an attorney at Faegre Baker Daniels in Chicago who represents businesses in employment-law issues. "There are protections in Illinois for both employers and employees, and that's where we're going to see conflict."

STATES THAT ALLOW A FORM OF MARIJUANA USE

Posey said some employers are under the mistaken impression that their hands are tied if a worker tests positive for marijuana and pulls out a prescription. But the Illinois law says that it does not "prohibit an employer from enforcing a policy concerning drug testing, zero-tolerance, or a drug free workplace provided the policy is applied in a nondiscriminatory manner."

The legislation also states that employers are not prohibited from "disciplining a registered qualifying patient for violating a workplace drug policy."

Such employer protections are modeled after laws in other states. Since 1996, 20 states and Washington, D.C., have enacted laws allowing medical marijuana.

Most states carve out exemptions for employers, letting them ban use on the premises and on-the-job intoxication, and decisions to terminate employees for positive drug tests resulting from medical marijuana use have been upheld by courts in some states.

GOING PUBLIC

Tracy Swartz

 @tracyswartz
 @tribune.com
 @tracyswartz

November isn't just for changing leaves—it's also a time for CTA transitions, from Ventra to construction on the Purple and Green lines. Here are the important transit dates for this week and next month.

■ Tuesday: The Illinois Department of Transportation is hosting an event about reconstructing the Eisenhower Expressway and potentially upgrading adjacent Blue Line stations. The town hall will be 7:30-9 p.m. at Gwendolyn Brooks Middle School, 325 S. Kenilworth Ave., in Oak Park.

■ Friday: Let there be heat! The CTA will turn on its heat lamps on elevated platforms for use until March 31. Some lucky riders already have been basking in the warmth, thanks to a few early switch-ons.

■ Saturday: Balance transfer events, in which riders can transfer the balances on their disposable or Chicago Cards to Ventra, continue this month. Riders can transfer their balances 9 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Saturday at Clarendon Park, 4501 N. Clarendon Ave. The final balance transfer event will be Dec. 13. Chicago Card Plus balances automatically transfer to Ventra when that card is activated.

■ Sunday: A seven-month northern Purple Line track project continues as crews work on the track between Milburn Street and the Linden stop. There will be night track work during the week through Nov. 28, according to the city of Evanston. There will be day track work on Saturdays and Sundays through Dec. 1. Take note, Northwestern football fans: Trains will operate on a single track at the Central Purple Line station.

■ Two weekends in early November: Party's over, Green Liners. After experiencing more frequent trains and free rides during the Red Line South project, the Green Line is seeing its own construction and reroutes this month. The CTA is planning on running express shuttles between Roosevelt and 35th-Bronzeville-IIT stations for two weekends this month as crews work on the new Cermak Green Line stop.

■ Nov. 12: Sound off here. The CTA is hosting a hearing at 6 p.m. at its headquarters, 567 W. Lake St., about its 2014 budget, which calls for no fare hikes or service cuts.

■ Nov. 15: Farewell, Chicago Cards. Ventra, the CTA's new fare payment system, will replace Chicago Card and Chicago Card Plus. If riders with these cards have not received their Ventra in the mail, they should call Ventra customer service or consider buying a card at a station. Disposable cards can be used until Dec. 15.

■ Nov. 29: Time to celebrate Xmass transit. The CTA has not released its holiday train schedule yet, but the inaugural annual ride for this train typically is the day after Thanksgiving.

STATIONARY A weekly dispatch from a CTA station of note

This week: Indiana Green Line

Divvy bike stations are fairly common at CTA stations on the North Side but more sparse at CTA stops on the South Side. The Indiana Green Line stop in Grand Boulevard has a Divvy bike outpost, one of 16 racks south of 35th Street between the Dan Ryan Expressway and the lakefront. The ability to connect is important since only one bus, the No. 39-Pershing, stops there.

Next up: Oak Park Blue Line

A wedded work of art

Couple seals the deal—quickly!—in front of famous painting

Chicago Tribune

The location of the civil wedding ceremony for Stacy Alan and John Poole was the groom's choice, one that called for it to be wrapped up in mere minutes.

His appreciation for art and the couple's desire for a simple exchange of vows are what led them, hand in hand, to Gallery 240 inside the Art Institute of Chicago over the weekend.

It was there, in front of French artist Georges Seurat's famous pointillism painting "A Sunday on La Grande Jatte" and two security guards who either looked the other way or didn't notice, that the Chicago couple wed.

There were no gallery reservations or requests for permission sought from museum officials. The Saturday morning ceremony was what their friends described as a 3-minute-long "guerrilla wedding" inside of a space the 43-year-old Hyde Park playwright finds sacred.

"It's kind of my church," said Poole, 43, speaking of the museum.

A member of the museum since he moved to Chicago from Texas almost two years ago, Poole said the painting "hypnotized" him from the first time he saw it. So when Alan, an Episcopal chaplain, decided she wanted to have separate civil and religious ceremonies for the wedding, he said it didn't take him long to choose the spot for the civil service.

Poole explained how the under-the-radar

John Poole and Stacy Alan are married inside the Chicago Institute of Art on Saturday. PHOTO PROVIDED BY STACY ALAN ceremony unfolded: About 20 of the couple's closest friends and family met outside the Michigan Avenue museum when it opened Saturday so they could get in, do the entire ceremony discreetly and distract as few patrons as possible.

Poole, clad in a dress coat and motorcycle boots, and ceremony officiant the Rev. Robert Smith, a former colleague of Alan's, entered first and went directly to the Medieval to Modern European Painting and Sculpture exhibit where the painting is featured.

Alan, 49, entered the gallery last in a teal dress. With unwitting patrons surrounding them, the couple quickly exchanged vows and kissed. When friends applauded, some other museum guests seem to join in, but some barely seemed to notice, Smith said.

"There was no 'dearly beloved,' we just started in on the vows," Alan said.

THE MUSEUM SAYS ...

The museum does open its doors for official weddings and dinner parties, spokeswoman Erin Hogan said. But museum staffers also know that engagements and quickie weddings, like the one Saturday, happen regularly in the museum's galleries, she said. As long as other patrons aren't disturbed, "it's kind of cute," Hogan said.

Penn State agrees to pay $59.7 million

Penn State has settled the bulk of claims by child sex abuse victims of Jerry Sandusky in a major step to move beyond a scandal that cost millions and upended a once-legendary football program, the university said Monday.

The university has agreed to pay $59.7 million to 26 men in the wake of Sandusky's conviction in June 2012 for abuse, Penn State said on its website.

Claims from six other men who said the former assistant football coach abused them as children have been rejected or may result in possible settlements, the school said.

"We hope this is another step forward in the healing process for those hurt by Mr. Sandusky, and another step forward for Penn State," university President Rodney Erickson said in a statement.

"We cannot undo what has been done, but we can and must do everything possible to learn from this and ensure it never happens again at Penn State," he added.

Sandusky, 69, was sentenced to 30 to 60 years in prison for abusing 10 boys over a 15-year period, in a case that tarnished the reputation of Penn State and its late football coach Joe Paterno, who lost his job for failing to report Sandusky to authorities.

"There is some sense of affirmation, but there remains the deep wounds and scars that are wide open and every day it's a struggle," said Jeff Anderson, a lawyer for the last two victims to accept the settlement.

The figure is close to the $60 million fine imposed by the NCAA—the equivalent of the annual gross revenue of the football program—along with other sanctions.

The victim settlement comes on top of $50 million already spent on fines, legal bills and other costs linked to the scandal that rocked the university after a grand jury indicted Sandusky in November 2011.

The school said the settlement amounts will not be funded by student tuition, taxpayer funds or donations.

The university maintains liability insurance policies that it believes will cover the settlements.

Respect For Rose

Good luck painting the Bulls' leader as a one-trick point guard

At long last, Derrick Rose is back. Not just playing preseason games, either. The Bulls' game Tuesday at Miami is the most anticipated Chicago season opener since, well, maybe ever. What did everyone miss most? You can start with this list. REDEYE

Barber

Andrew Barber, Fake Shore Drive owner and creator

For Rose, I respect the way that he cares so deeply about his city. The day he broke down in tears during his Adidas press conference because of the violence in Chicago, more specifically in Englewood, was so powerful and sincere. You could feel his pain. It wasn't an act. He really wants to change things and make a difference.

Adrian Griffin, Bulls assistant coach

Derrick is humble. Everyone loves a guy who wants it and puts in the time and energy and focus. He wants to be great. And you gotta respect that. I've never seen a more humble All-Star, or superstar, we'll say. He's definitely himself a superstar in this league, but he doesn't carry himself with the ego. He's all about the team, and all about doing whatever it takes. ... He reminds me of Kobe, and MJ. Guys like that, Guys that you're gonna have to cut their hearts out because they're going to keep coming.

IF THE SHOE FITS

It's hard to remember all the shoes Derrick Rose has worn the past five years. That said, RedEye set out to uncover most (if not all) of the famous footwear Rose has sported. Take a look at some of our favorites, including the kicks he'll wear during home and away games to start the season.

Christopher Cason, CSN Bulls reporter

The one thing I admire about [Derrick] is that he truly gets it. There's an unbelievable amount of pressure that comes in playing in your hometown. You add on being a No. 1 pick, the youngest MVP in league history, the indisputable face of the franchise since MJ and playing under those six [championship] banners, and for some, it could become claustrophobic just coming in to work every day. Derrick understands all of that and embraces it. The love and loyalty he has for his family and the city of Chicago is second to none.

Darren Haydar, Chicago Wolves

I respect D-Rose for being an elite player who truly makes his teammates better, a player willing to take the big shot, but also willing to give it to a teammate if they are in an open position.

McLeary-Sherman

DeAnna McLeary-Sherman, co-founder of True Star Foundation

He seems authentically humble. A lot of people seem humble because they know they should be, but it seems like it just really comes from an authentic place. You just really want to root for this guy, especially in the midst of his injury and what he's gone through for over a year now.

Sarah Spain, ESPN Chicago

I'll skip over all the off-the-court stuff that has made the whole city admire Rose since his first day. Instead, I'll say I admire his ability to explode off the ground and slam the ball through the hoop with the force of a rocket. His above-the-rim game is simply astounding for a 6-3 point guard. Watching a power forward with legs and arms for miles throw down sick jams is entertaining—watching Rose do it is art.

Quick stroll down memory lane

While tearing up his knee is perhaps the low point of Derrick Rose's career, he's had plenty to smile about. REDEYE

Swirsky

Chuck Swirsky, Bulls announcer

The story takes place on Jan. 17, 2011 in Memphis. It was a nationally televised ESPN event featuring the Bulls and Grizzlies. ... As is the case on national games prior to the contest, media relations directors usher coaches and star players in and out of a nearby production room to meet the game day announcers as well as conducting a sit-down interview.

Rose was accompanied by a Bulls staff member and an ESPN crew. I saw Rose open the ... door and allowed others to enter before he did. Manners. Grace. Respect. That's Derrick Rose.

At the end of his rookie season the Bulls lost a heartbreaking seven-game series to the Celtics on May 2, 2009.

Leaving the arena to the bus for a flight back to Chicago, his brilliant rookie season over, Rose stopped me and said, "Chuck, thanks for the support this year. I appreciate it." Not a lot of athletes would do that.

1	Derrick Rose's regular-season return is the biggest Bulls game since ...	We get it. Just beat Miami.	... Sunday Morning.	... Nate Robinson put on the cape and beat the Nets in three overtimes.	... Jordan's first game post-"Space Jam" filming. Could his knees recover from a summer with Bugs? YES!	... since the playoff games D-Rose sat out.
2	How strong is your dislike for the Miami Heat these days?	Not as strong as it is for Miami Heat fans.	Vicious.	I'm Kanye's new French accent, and the Heat are L.A. paparazzi.	Remember when Brenda saw Kelly hanging with Dylan on "90210" for the first time? Yeah. Anger.	My dislike of the Heat is further along than LeBron's male-pattern baldness.
3	Make a prediction for the NBA season.	Kobe wants to be a Bull by the end of it.	Who Loves the Suns?	LeBron will average 40 points and 10 assists and win Finals MVP, but still fall just short of Jordan's expectations.	Dwight Howard whines. A lot. I win Prediction War 2013. Go home, other people!	Both Jason Collins and Lamar Odom will play this season.
4	What's wrong with the Blackhawks' goaltending?	Beer belly from a Stanley Cup hangover.	Heroin.	Everything's on ice. Take it to the alley and defense will improve.	Tough to make saves when the mannish scent of Patrick Sharp is just feet away ... ooh.	They're not stopping that puck thingy.
5	What's the best thing the Bears have going for them right now?	The rest of the season! Bear DOWN!	Run Run Run.	The city they play in is amazing.	Well, there's Jay Cut ... no. Er. Lance Br ... no. (Curls into ball, starts to cry)	Their games are during the day, which won't interfere with the return of "Real Housewives of Atlanta."

6 itching questions for the 2013-14 Bulls season

BY BEN JOHNSON | FOR REDEYE

How will this year's Bulls team do with Derrick Rose back? Can the team make a leap into the "genuine contender" category, or will their style of play lead to more injuries at just the wrong time? Will the team make a trade or stand pat? These are the obvious burning questions, and they are boring. I want answers to the itching questions nobody else is asking.

REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR BEN JOHNSON
IS A COMEDIAN AT IO THEATER IN CHICAGO.

1

Why is coach Tom Thibodeau so cagey about his favorite composer?

In an offseason interview with Grantland, classical music buff Thibodeau declined to answer a question about his favorite composer or piece. Probably because he didn't want to sound gauche by admitting it's the Chicago Symphony Orchestra's rendition of "Chelsea Dagger."

How come Kirk Hinrich doesn't have gray hair?

I know Hinrich is only 32, but he has one of those dignified "premature gray" faces. Everything you hear from the Bulls about Hinrich talks about how much of a calming, professional veteran presence he brings to the team. He should dye his hair gray. Or stop dyeing it, if that's what he's doing, which I have no information about and am in no way insinuating. If Carlos Boozer can spray paint his bald head, Hinrich should be gray. That's all I'm saying.

Will the Bulls trade for a foreign player with an unpronounceable name to trip up radio play-by-play man Chuck Swirsky?

As it stands, this roster is depressingly pronounceable, which means Swirsky will resort to extensive nicknaming. In contrast, look at Milwaukee. The Bucks picked up a Greek kid named Giannis Antetokounmpo. I already have this year's Bulls-Bucks games circled on my calendar. "Brandon Knight to Anteto ... koku ... mempo ... swish!" I'm going to go listen in the car and laugh my head off.

Will Joakim Noah hang out with Slash?

Noah should not cut that hair. What he should do instead is wear it down and top it off with a giant top hat that has a belt around it. That would be awesome.

5

Can I have an advance copy of the Jimmy Butler bobblehead?

I did not realize until I looked at the promotional schedule that my life is in sore need of a Jimmy Butler bobblehead. I would ask it yes or no questions to pump myself up. "Did you overcome a difficult childhood, including a brief period of homelessness?" (nods yes) "And are you now one of the most exciting young guards in the NBA?" (nods) "And do you think I should drop out of grad school?" (shakes head vigorously). That is JUST what I need.

Why does the team need five dental consultants?

This is straight from the staff directory. How come the Bulls have five dentists on hand? Are the dentists divided by position? Are we sure five is enough? The way the NBA is evolving, should they also hire an additional dentist for small-ball lineups with a shooter at power forward?

BRANDON VS. BRANDON

Brandon Meriweather
GETTY IMAGES FILE

Whoa. The virtual gloves are off now.

Washington safety Brandon Meriweather attacked Brandon Marshall's history of domestic violence Monday in response to the Bears receiver's stated belief that Meriweather "needs to get suspended or taken out of the game completely" for repeatedly hitting defenseless receivers.

"He feels like I need to be kicked out of the league? I feel like people who beat their girlfriends should be kicked out, too," Meriweather told Washington media, according to The Washington Times. "You tell me who you'd rather have: Somebody who plays aggressive on the field, or somebody who beat up their girlfriend?"

The NFL suspended Meriweather for two on-field hits against the Bears. And in 2007, Marshall was arrested in a Denver suburb on suspicion of domestic violence.

Marshall responded Monday on Twitter: "There is only one way to avoid criticism: do nothing, say nothing, and be nothing #Machine-Marshall," he posted @BMarshall.

and Don Trip

Two of hearts

Starlito and Don Trip make a high-value pairing

By Ernest Wilkins | REDEYE

The power of a quality team-up can't be understated. From the Hart Foundation to Jordan and Pippen, putting together a cohesive unit can help an individual achieve greater success than on his or her own. Two amazing rappers who have not found the mainstream audience they probably deserve have taken note of this and combined their efforts. Starlito (who briefly was affiliated with Cash Money Records) and Don Trip (2012 XXL mag freshman who until recently was signed to Interscope) first united in 2011 for "Step Brothers" (inspired by the Will Ferrell/John C. Reilly film). The tape proved the two to be a classic tag team, with Trip playing the bruiser and Lito injecting humor and personality. RedEye emailed with the guys to get an insight into the life of an independent act and to get some advice for young rappers.

ERWILKINS@TRIBUNE.COM | @ERNESTWILKINS

From Three 6 Mafia to 8ball & MJG, Chicago has a history of supporting rap from Memphis, Nashville—hell, Tennessee in general. When I was a kid, people had those tapes and anything Rap-A-Lot around at all times. Is there a "Tennessee sound?" Does that even exist?

Starlito: More than just a sound, I just think there is an abundance of quality content coming from the area. From us to Yo Gotti to Juicy J to Young Dolph to Young Buck, it's not that any of us sound alike, but at the same time we don't sound like anybody from anywhere else.

Don Trip: I don't think Tennessee has a distinct sound; I can't say if that's needed or not. I enjoy the variety, personally.

I think there's a bit of disconnect between what the mainstream thinks being a rapper

Kevin Gates with Starlito and Don Trip

is about, the chains and the cars and all that stereotypical stuff, and what the reality is.

Can you break down the life of an independent artist?

DT: An independent artist has to be everything for themselves. Even if not physically, all responsibilities lie on you. It's a lot more work for an indie artist, but if managed properly, it's far more rewarding.

Starlito: It's all about perspective. Some rappers only rap about that stuff and win, so it's not a disconnect any more than it is a perception. People perceive that stuff as success symbols and so you get new artists that try to emulate it. As an independent artist, I oversee and have a hand in, along with final say-so, on ALL of my day-to-day operations. It's a lot of work simply corresponding with all the people I'm involved with in business, but with the extra responsibilities I reap greater rewards along with a better understanding of what's going on.

DT: The cars and jewelry are just trophies. A lotta people don't understand the value of saving and investing and re-investing into your craft.

What's the one piece of advice you'd like to give young rappers who read this piece?

Starlito: Go to school.

DT: The only advice that I would give is that success takes sacrifice, as well as investment. The music business is by all means a "business."

Sean Hayes is on top of ‘The World’

Los Angeles Times

Sean Hayes recently returned to TV playing a single gay father of a teenage girl—and a series lead for the first time since “Will & Grace”—on NBC’s “Sean Saves the World.” It’s one of five shows on the air from Hazy Mills, the production company he owns with Todd Milliner.

Is TV running out of characters that people haven’t seen before?

It’s always a challenge. It helps to start from a personal place. One of [executive producer Victor Fresco’s kids] is a teenage daughter. And I think it’s great that [Fresco is] drawing on his personal experience being a father to a teenage daughter as a straight man, because the comparison to straight and gay, as a parent, and the similarities between the two are exciting for me to show.

I would think the differences would be negligible.

That’s clear to me and you, but a lot of times people in America still have questions about that.

Your mom was a single parent. Do you draw on her for your character?

Absolutely. But I love the fact that my mom always taught me anything is possible, and the unconditional love she showed made me believe that I could do anything and she would be happy about that.

“Will & Grace” was controversial in the beginning, and your character, Jack, was accused of being “too gay.” When did you realize the tide was turning?

I was so young. It made me go back in the closet [with the media] because I was so overwhelmed at 26 or 27.

I didn’t want the responsibility, I didn’t know how to handle the responsibility of speaking for the gay community. I always felt like I owed them a huge apology for coming out too late. Some people in the gay community were very upset with me for not coming out on their terms. They don’t stop to think about what’s going on in somebody’s personal life and the struggles that they’re having. It was all very scary. We got death threats. It was a really rough time for me, but I was also having the time of my life.

What kind of offers did you get after “Will and Grace”?

Not too many. I still don’t. That’s why you have to be a multi-hyphenate now more than ever if you like to constantly be working and remain in this business. I love showing people that I wasn’t that guy, the guy in “Will & Grace.”

So you’re nothing like Jack McFarland?

That’s the ironic thing. I’m so boring and grounded, and I like quiet and I like structure and I like goals. I couldn’t be more opposite.

Will she make the cut?

Zap2it.com
"Project Runway All Stars" kicked off its third season Thursday with new host Alyssa Milano, guest judge Debbie Harry and a whole lot of scores to be settled.
"I have always been a huge 'Project Runway' fan," Milano said. "I watched since the very first season."
Milano, who has a licensed sports apparel line for women—and is the daughter of a designer and granddaughter of a milliner—says she loves being around the fashions from creation to execution.
The new "All Stars" season features designers Isaac Mizrahi and Georgina Chapman returning as judges, joined by newcomer Zanna Roberts Rassi of Marie Claire magazine.
"The emotion is really raw on competition television and because there is always a clock ticking down. It [lends] itself to the drama," Milano said. "The fun of it for those of us watching at home, we all have our own pick."
The returning contestants bring attitude, and a need to avenge themselves, except for Jeffrey Sebelia, who won Season 3.
Most seem to feel the way Viktor Luna (Season 9, third place) does: "I was robbed," he said.
Others are poised for a fight, and the tension is pretty clear from the moment the designers hit Mood.
"There is drama, personality conflicts and the drama is heightened because they are all tired and the competition is so fierce there is no way they couldn't be emotionally drained and drama gets more and more as the episodes progress," Milano said.

FUNNY BABY

Olivia Wilde and Jason Sudeikis are on the way to making a big happy family. The engaged stars confirmed Sunday that they're expecting their first child, online.com reports. Wilde told Marie Claire mag earlier this year that three kids "is like a little party," so don't expect this baby to be the last.

I went from, in my mind, hideous, to not hideous.”

—Lisa Kudrow, to the Saturday Evening Post, on getting a nose job the summer before her freshman year of high school. She recently started a guest spot on “Scandal” as a potential presidential candidate.

Arrrrrrrrgh, mateys!

It's not guns or even the crocodile who swallowed a clock that pirates fear most: It's Britney, bitch. A British naval officer told the U.K.'s Metro that Britney Spears songs are blasted over the ships' speakers whenever there's danger of a Somali pirate attack. “Her songs were chosen by the security team because they thought the pirates would hate them most,” Merchant navy officer Rachel Owens said.

HOT DATE

OCT. 31

That's when all eight seasons of “Dexter” become available on Netflix Instant. Because “It's the Great Pumpkin, Charlie Brown” just isn't scary enough anymore.

‘Hunger’ pangs

OK, “Hunger Games” fans—here's your last appetizer before the big show. The final trailer for “The Hunger Games: Catching Fire” debuted Sunday night during the World Series. Fans get their first peek at the movie's jabberjays, Katniss and Peeta's newest fiery couture and some wild action inside the arena. Reminder: The Rick drops Nov. 22, a whole WEEK before Thanksgiving.

Chicago style?

And the winner of the lead role in the John Belushi biopic is ... Emile Hirsch? Yeah, we're not quite seeing it either. The “Into The Wild” star has been cast as the Chicago funnyman whose life ended tragically early, vulture.com reports. Here's hoping Dan Aykroyd stars as himself.
